

Law & Society (BA) Learning Outcomes

The following are the learning outcomes for the Law and Society major:

- A. Students will demonstrate knowledge of law, legal phenomena and legal institutions from a variety of perspectives outside the discipline of law, with a focus on the relationship between law and political and social change.
- B. Students will initiate, develop, and present independent research addressing and analyzing the relationship between law and society.
- C. Students will develop written and oral communication skills to express informed opinions about issues in law and society.